DR. TUTT'S
EXPECTORANT
Is the most genial balsam ever used by sufferers from pulmonary diseases. It is composed of herbal products, which have a specific effect on the throat and lungs; detaches from the air cells all irritating matter; causes it to be expectorated, and at once checks the inflammation which produces the cough. A single dose relieves the most distressing paroxysm, soothes nervousness, and enables the sufferer to enjoy quietude at night. Being a pleasant cordial, it tones the weak stomach, and is especially recommended for children.

What others say about Tutt's Expectorant.

Had Asthma Thirty Years.
BALTIMORE, February 3, 1875.
"I have had Asthma thirty years, and never found a medicine that had such a happy effect."
W. F. HOGAN, Charles St.

A Child's Idea of Merit.
NEW ORLEANS, November 11, 1876.
"Tutt's Expectorant is a family name in my house. My wife thinks it the best medicine in the world, and the children say it is 'nicer than molasses candy.'"
NOAH WOODWARD, 101 N. Poydras St.

"Six, and all Croupy."
"I am the mother of six children; all of them have been croupy. Without Tutt's Expectorant, I don't think they could have survived some of the attacks. It is a mother's best friend."
MARY STEVENS, Frankfort, Ky.

A Doctor's Advice.
"In my practice, I advise all families to keep Tutt's Expectorant, in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, diphtheria, etc."
T. P. ELLIS, M.D., Newark, N. J.
Sold by all druggists. Price $1.00. Office 35 Murray Street, New York.

TUTT'S PILLS
"THE TREE IS KNOWN BY ITS FRUIT."
"Tutt's Pills are worth their weight in gold."
REV. L. R. SIMPSON, Louisville, Ky.
"Tutt's Pills are a special blessing of the nineteenth century."
REV. F. R. OSGOOD, New York.
"I have used Tutt's Pills for torpor of the liver. They are superior to any medicine for bilious disorders ever made."
I. P. CARR, Attorney at Law, Augusta, Ga.
"I have used Tutt's Pills five years in my family. They are unequalled for constiveness and biliousness."
F. R. WILSON, Georgetown, Texas.
"I have used Tutt's Pills with great benefit."
W. W. MANN, Editor Mobile Register.
"We sell fifty boxes of Tutt's Pills to five of all others."
SAVRE & CO., Carlsville, Ga.
"Tutt's Pills have only to be tried to establish their merits. They work like magic."
W. H. BARRON, 95 Summer St., Boston.
"There is no medicine so well adapted to the cure of bilious disorders as Tutt's Pills."
JOS. BRUMMEL, Richmond, Virginia.
AND A THOUSAND MORE.
Sold by druggists. 25 cents a box. Office 35 Murray Street, New York.

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?
A state of the stomach in which its functions are disturbed, often without the presence of other diseases, attended with loss of appetite, nausea, heartburn, sour stomach, rising of food after eating, sense of fullness or weight in the stomach, acid or acid eructations, a fluttering or sinking at the pit of the stomach, palpitations, dilation of the senses, morbid feelings, and uneasiness of various kinds, which is permanently cured if you take

HEPATINE
Constipation or Costiveness?

WHAT IS
A state of the bowels in which the evacuations do not take place as designed by nature and are immediately hard and expelled with difficulty, caused by a low state of the system, which diminishes the action of the muscular coat of the stomach. This disease is easily cured if you will take

HEPATINE
Indigestion

WHAT IS
A condition of the stomach produced by inactivity of the liver, when the food is not properly digested, and in each condition the sufferer is liable to become the victim of cholera, fevers and general prostration. It is positively cured if you take

HEPATINE
Sick and Nervous Headache?

WHAT IS
It was at one time supposed that the seat of the brain was in the stomach. Certain it is that a morbid sympathy exists between the two, and what effects one has an immediate effect on the other. So it is that a disordered stomach invariably is followed by a sympathetic action of the brain, and hence all arise from the same cause. Headaches are easily cured if you will take

Charlie's Kiss.

I am sure nobody who sees my placid husband now would believe that he was once one of the most jealous-tempered men in all England; and, as the way in which I cured him of his folly was very simple, I will relate the means pursued by me, for the sake of other victims to the absurd mania, be they male or female.

My parents died while I was quite an infant, leaving me to the care of my maternal grandmother, who did her best to spoil me, and was most successful in her treatment. The first eighteen years of my life were passed with few trials or troubles. My grandmother and I lived in a cottage at Brixton, the prettiest little specimen of suburban architecture imaginable, the only drawback in which was a large stone portico. Granny was very proud of this unsightly thing; I hated it, not on account of its inappropriateness, but simply because it intercepted my view of the garden gate, so that from our sitting-room window we could not catch even a glimpse of a visitor.

Although my grandmother was rather old, she was so full of life and fond of making young people happy that I never felt dull in her society, and made her the confidant of all my little adventures, and she entered into them with all the zest of a girl.

One day the even tenor of our lives was disturbed by the arrival of an invitation from my aunt, who lived at Scarborough, asking me to spend some weeks with her. At first I refused to accept it, for this, my only near relative, was almost a stranger to me.

"You will go, my dear Eva, to oblige me," said Granny, coaxingly; "I want to have the cottage thoroughly done up, inside and out, and this will be an excellent opportunity."

I went, spent three months very delightfully at Scarborough, and returned home, leaving my heart in the safe-keeping of Claud Anderson. I loved him very dearly; but a certain fear which I felt for him prevented that perfect love which would have made me quite happy. During the month we were engaged, before I left the North, scarcely a day passed without 'one or more little snarls' taking place between us. I know the word I have used is a vulgar one, but no other will answer my purpose, seeing that Claude and I did not positively quarrel.

There were a great many nice young men and lads in and out of my aunt's house all day long; for she was most kind and hospitable, beside being the mother of six very pretty daughters. These male bipeds were constant sources of jealousy on the part of Claude, who in all other respects was sensible, clever, and I might say almost perfect.

I was unusually full of health and spirits, also (he himself told me) very pretty and charming; so A brought me a bouquet of roses, B a box of preserve fruits, C a pug puppy; in fact, the whole alphabet, assented by my six female cousins, conspired with me to tease poor jealous Claude, until positively I believe he felt glad when he put me into the train and sent me back to London with a gold guard-ring on my finger and a doubting, aching heart.

Of course, when I reached home all my doubts and fears were confided to dear Granny's sympathizing ears. She listened to my tale of love and woe; then said:

"He must be cured of this folly before you become his wife, my darling."

A week after my return home came a letter from Claude, telling me that he had received a very lucrative government appointment in London, and was now in a position to ask for Granny's consent to our early marriage.

He came, and made himself so agreeable—there were no 'letters of the alphabet' to tease him—that Granny thought I had exaggerated his weakness; but she was soon convinced of her error.

One afternoon Claude came as usual; business had gone wrong with him, and he was rather cross. Grandmother went upstairs for her afternoon nap, and Claude began to read aloud to me—a most unfortunate proceeding on his part, for it happened that I was obliged to listen for the street-door bell, and wished to conceal the fact from my companion.

I never did care much for poetry, but that day I quite abhorred it. In the midst of a sentimental piece which Claude was reading most beautifully, 'ting, ting' went the bell; up I jumped, and with a muttering 'Excuse me' left the room.

The same interruption happened again, and a third time. I became so nervous that I left the sitting-room door open, and this was the unlucky speech which met the ears of my offended companion:

"Don't, Charlie, dear! Leave me alone, sir; I will not allow you to kiss me, although I am very fond of you."

Here followed a scuffle and some suppressed laughter.

When I returned to the sitting-room, Claude stood looking the very picture of indignation.

"Pray may I ask who Charlie dear is? Probably only a boy," said he, satirically.

"No, he is not a boy," I answered, with a careless laugh—this 'only a boy' was a sneering allusion to a lad of sixteen of whom Claude had once been jealous, and to whom I had just applied the term.

"Then I must insist upon knowing what man dared to attempt to kiss you," exclaimed Claude, fiercely.

"Would you like to see him?" I asked, tauntingly. And then we had a sharp quarrel, which terminated in his saying:

"Eva Raynham, I give you twenty-four hours to consider whether you will tell me the name of the impudent rascal whom you permitted to take such a liberty without properly resenting it. If to-morrow night you persist in obstinate refusal we must part then and for ever. I can pardon frivolity, but not deceit."

I covered my face with my hand, and said in a low tone:

"I can not."

In a moment he dashed out of the room, and left the house, banging the street door so violently that Granny ran down alarmed for the plate basket, and found me—laughing immoderately.

* * * * *

The next evening came, and with it Claude, looking so pale and wretched that I quite pitied him. Immediately on his arrival Granny left us alone and for a few minutes silence followed, which was broken by his saying in a most severe tone:

"Have you made up your mind to tell the truth, Eva, or to make us both miserable for life?"

"I am not miserable; nor would you be if you were not such a foolish dolt," I answered.

"Heartless coquette!" he began, when a ring at the door bell caused me to leave the room hastily, for it was Charlie come again. Of course I expected Claude to follow me—but he was not mean, dear fellow!

Very soon I returned, followed by Charlie, on all fours. Yes, the offender was only a large fat terrier, blind of one eye, and old enough, even had he been a biped, not to awaken jealousy in Claude's breast.

Never shall I forget the expression of humiliation on poor Claude's face at the discovery of his unknown rival. The cure was more than half completed, and dear Granny finished it, for she preached such a beautiful little sermon about the folly of jealousy that it made me cry, and Claude's voice was quite husky when next he spoke.

After it was all made up, and matters were pleasant again, I said:

"Now, Claude, I will tell you why the bell had such a disturbing effect on me yesterday. Our only domestic had gone out for the afternoon, and I, from a weak-minded pride, wished to conceal the reduced condition of our establishment from you. First came the baker, then the postman, and, finally the milk woman, who is a great friend of mine, and sole proprietress of the offending Charlie. I am very fond of the poor old dog, but could never allow either him or any other animal to lick my face; hence the expostulation on my part, and our recent quarrel, which has ended so satisfactorily."

Claude looked at the matter so good naturedly, and owned his folly with such unflinching candor, that I determined never again to flirt or tease him, I have kept my resolution, with one exception. Sometimes I say 'bow-wow' to him, and to this very day it makes him gnaw his moustache with impatience, for he is thus led to call to mind the—to me—somewhat droll incident of 'Charlie's Kiss.'

Mr. Sans Dissimulation to Miss Mary Moderation.

Madam—Worthy of estimation, after long consideration, of the great reputation, you possess in the nation, I have a strong inclination, to become your relation. On your approbation of this declaration, I shall make preparation, to remove my situation to a more convenient station, to profess my admiration, and if such obligation, is worthy of observation and can obtain commiseration, will be an aggrandizement, beyond all calculation, of the joys and exultation.

Yours truly in love.

SANS DISSIMULATION.

Miss Mary Moderation to Mr. Sans Dissimulation.

Sir—I perused your oration with much deliberation, and a little consternation of the great inflation of your weak imagination, to show such veneration on so slight a foundation. But after examination and serious contemplation, I suppose your admiration was the fruit of recreation, or had sprung from ostentation to display your education by an odd enunciation, or rather multiplication of words of the termination, though of great variation in each respective signification. Now without dispute so tedious an occupation deserves commendation, and thinking imitation. I am without hesitation yours truly in flirtation.

MARY MODERATION.

The Methodists.

Farmers are fully alive to the idea that as the consumption of corn by Americans as a substitute for wheat is rapidly increasing, the quality of the corn must be improved. This is especially so in regard to the Southern States where corn is so universally cultivated. Georgia farmers are agitating this subject, as well as the one that the South will make her own pork, and not lose the freight from Cincinnati or St. Louis.

A Noted Lawyer.

A noted lawyer of the Oxford circuit had a case in hand in which, among other things, he wished to prove that his client had no money; and to that end he cross questioned one of his opponent's witnesses as follows:

You asked my client for money, did you not?

Well—yes sir.

Answer promptly, sir, let us have no hesitation. You asked him for money, now what was his answer?

I don't know as I can tell.

But surely you remember.

Yes, sir.

Then out with it. What was his answer?

I'd rather not tell.

Ho! ho! you are on that track, are you? You will not tell?

I would rather not, sir.

But you must, and if you do not answer my question truly and promptly, I'll call upon the court to commit you for contempt.

Well, sir if I must tell tales out of school, here you have it. I asked him yesterday if he could lend me half a crown, and he told me he could not.

And you believed him, did you not?

Yes sir, for he said you had robbed him of every penny of his ready money, and if he didn't get out of your hands pretty soon, his wife and children would come to —

That will do, sir. You can step down.
